The digital cut sheet and the Harvesting App

How an order in the office becomes the crew's cut list, and how the office sees the cutting as it happens.

On most farms someone rewrites tomorrow's cutting from today's orders, and a change after that is found out in the paddock. In Turfware the cut sheet builds itself from confirmed orders. The crew work from an iPad, and the office sees their progress live.

The Daily Orders dashboard on the crew's iPad: the day's cutting by variety.

From order to cut sheet

The harvest date fills itself in

Set the delivery date on the order and the harvest date pre-fills to the same day or the day before, whichever your farm has chosen. Change it if the cut is on another day.

Each turf line knows its farm

Pick the variety, the farm it's cut from and the square metres. One order can carry several varieties and keeps one order number.

Cut sheet notes go with it

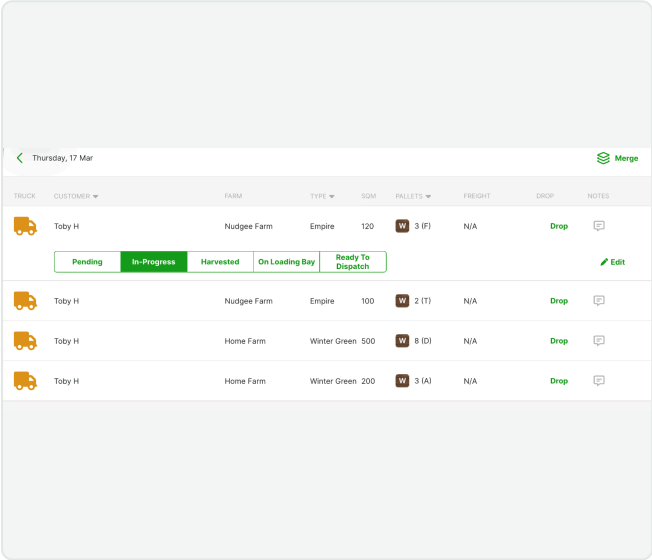

A note on the order, such as “display home order”, shows on the crew's cut sheet.

It appears on the iPad on the day

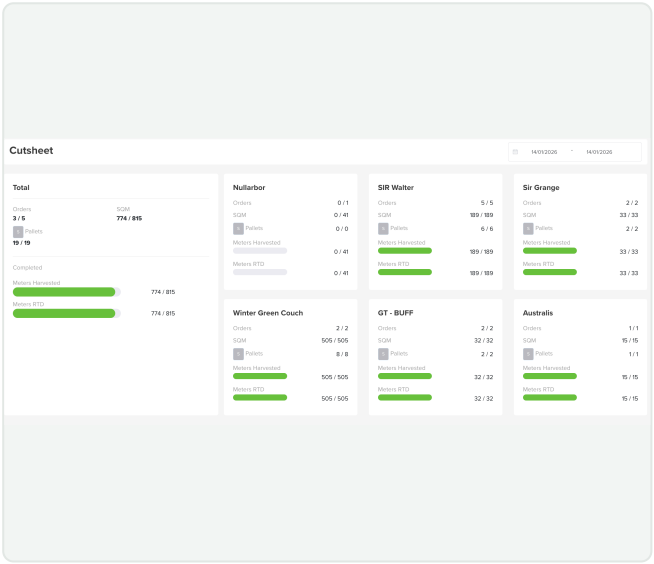

Confirmed orders show in the Harvesting App on their harvest date, with a 5 Day Forecast tab for what's coming.

In the paddock

1. The crew sign in and pick a role: Harvester or Forklift. Both work from the same cut sheet.
2. The dashboard shows the day's totals and each variety: orders, square metres, wooden and steel pallets, and progress bars for metres harvested and metres ready to deliver.
3. Each order moves along Pending, In-Progress, Harvested, On Loading Bay, Ready To Dispatch. Marking it Harvested stamps a harvest tag so the cut can be traced.
4. If something's not right, the crew tap Edit and amend the farm, pallet type, square metres, pallets or notes on the order.

For the office and the yard

- The web app's Cut Sheet is a live window into the paddock: no phone calls to ask how far through they are.
- A printable farm cut sheet (PDF or Excel) with units, rolls or slabs, pallets and estimated weight.
- A5 pallet labels, one per pallet: customer, address, delivery date, carrier and “Pallet 3 of 8”.
