Delivery and proof of delivery

Turfware

Truck runs on one screen, the driver's day on their phone, and a photo and signature against every drop.

When a customer rings to say a pallet was short, late or never came, you want more than the driver's word. Turfware gives you the photo, the signature and the time, saved on the order before the truck leaves the site, and keeps the customer informed along the way.

Proof of delivery as the driver takes it: the pallets on site.

Planning the runs

Build each truck's run

In Routing, drag the day's orders onto trucks. Turfware maps the route and shows each truck's run and capacity.

Tell customers their window

Click Send Confirmation on a truck and every customer on it is emailed their delivery window, with an SMS to the site contact if you switch it on.

Dockets and freight files

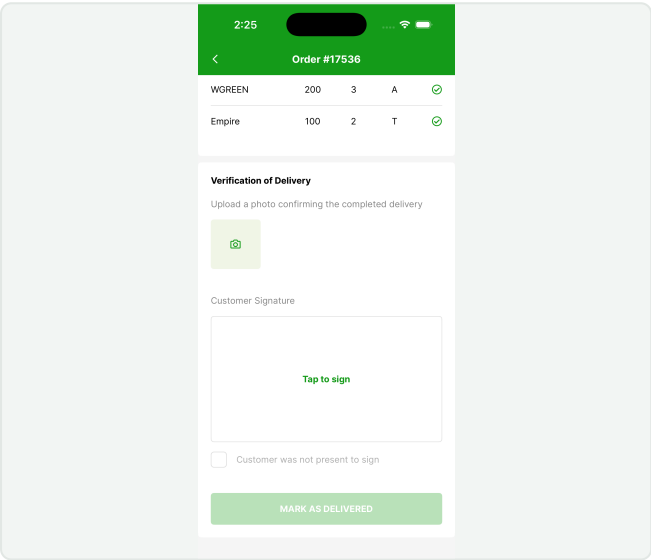

Print delivery dockets as a PDF, or export a CSV booking file for an outside carrier.

Multi-leg freight

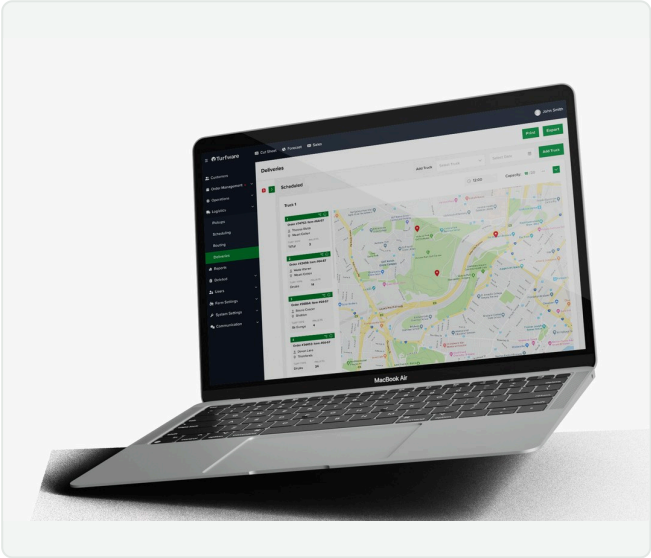

Book a delivery as a farm truck to a depot, then a carrier to the customer. Each carrier sees only its own leg.

The driver's day

1. Drivers sign in with their mobile number and a one-time code. The front screen shows the day's runs, ordered by priority.
2. Show route plots every stop on a map. Each order shows the site contact (tap to call), the address, the delivery time, notes from the office, and the turf, pallets and pallet code.
3. Get Directions opens the phone's maps app with a route to the drop.
4. At the drop: take a photo, the customer signs on the screen, and Mark as Delivered. The time logs itself.

Verification of Delivery on the driver's phone.

Routing: orders on a truck, with the route calculated.

What happens when it's marked delivered

- The photo and signature are saved to the order's Documents tab, with the time captured.
- The order's status changes to Delivered on every list and report.
- The customer is emailed the photo and signature, with a button to leave a review.
- The next customer on the run gets an ETA based on where the driver is.
